AIM AND OBJECTIVE OF THE STUDY:

Food adulterants are cheaper substances that are added to food and thereby adversely affect the nature and quality of the food. Some adulterants are found to be hazard to human health especially if consumed over a long period. Un-permitted food additives or permitted food additives added in excess; both can cause serious damage to health. The use of artificial colours like Orange II affects growth and affects the functioning of vital organs like the liver, kidneys, heart spleen, lungs, bones and the immune systems. The commonly used metanil yellow could be injurious to the stomach, ileum, rectum, liver, kidney, ovary and testis. All the non-permitted colours can also bring changes in genes, mostly it has been identified as potential cancer-causing agents. Recently, a major Indian supplier was caught and had to destroy tons of turmeric for dangerous adulteration using metanil yellow and red oxide of lead – which is highly carcinogenic.

INTRODUCTION:

Adulteration of food commonly defined as “the addition or subtraction of any substance to or from food, so that the natural composition and quality of food substance is affected”. Adulteration is either intentional by either removing substances to food or altering the existing natural properties of food knowingly. Unintentional adulteration is usually attributed to ignorance’s, carelessness or lack of facilities for maintaining food quality.

TYPES OF ADULTERANTS:

Type	Substances Added
Intentional Adulterants	Sand, marble chips, stones, mud, other filth, talc, chalk powder, water, mineral oil and harmful colour.
Incidental adulterants	Pesticide residues, droppings of rodents, larvae in foods.
Metallic contaminants	Arsenic from pesticides, lead from water, effluent from chemical industries, tin from cans.

POISONOUS OR DELETERIOUS SUBSTANCES:

Generally, if a food contains a poisonous or deleterious substance that may render it injurious to health, it is adulterated. For example, apple cider contaminated with E.coli O157:H7 and Brie cheese contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes are adulterated.

If a food contains a poisonous substance in excess of a tolerance, regulatory limit, or action level, mixing it with "clean" food to reduce the level of contamination is not allowed. The deliberate mixing of adulterated food with good food renders the finished product adulterated.

FILTH AND FOREIGN MATTER:

Filth and extraneous material include any objectionable substances in foods, such as foreign matter (for example, glass, metal, plastic, wood, stones, sand, cigarette butts), undesirable parts of the raw plant material (such as stems, pits in pitted olives, pieces of shell in canned oysters), and filth (namely, rot, insect and rodent parts, excreta, decomposition).

PROBLEM SPECIFICATION:

How can Adulteration be Prevented?

According to the National Health Service and Food Research Institute, several food products have been adulterated to increase the quantity and make more profit. This practice of adding adulterants to food products are quite common in all in developing countries and other backward countries.

Every year, the 7th of April is celebrated as the World Health Day globally and as per the reports, WHO aims to bring a general awareness about the adulterations of food products, motivate and inspire everybody to have a healthy, balanced diet.

Here are certain safety tips to avoid Adulteration:

- Avoid dark coloured, junk and other processed foods.
- Make sure to clean and store all the grains, pulses and other food products.
- Wash fruits and vegetables thoroughly in running water before they are used.
- Check if the seal is valid or not, before buying food products like milk, oil and other pouches.
- Always make sure to check and buy products having an FSSAI-validated label, along with the license number, list of ingredients, manufactured date, and its expiration.

PROBLEMS TAKENUP:

Food Adulteration- And its Impact on Our Health:

To define it simply, food adulteration marks the depreciation in the quality of food i.e. unsafe and substandard for human consumption. The quality is lowered either by the addition of inferior quality material or by the extraction of a valuable

RECOMMENDATIONS AND CONCLUSIONS:

Indian food is incomplete without the addition of spices. If adulterated spices are consumed daily there will be a health hazard like nausea, anemia, paralysis, brain damage, abortions, insomnia, vomiting, constipation and even mental retardation. The safest way to avoid adulterated spices is to purchase properly packed spices containing either an ISI mark or an Agmark from a trusted source. If someone is selling adulterated products strict actions should be taken against them by the government. So it is also wise to purchase raw spices and grind them at home to get a powder which is real, fresh safer also.

The information on awareness of methods to avoid adverse health effects caused by food adulteration has conducted nearly 50 houses of Ambapuram village and it helps the people to understand different methods to prevent food adulteration.

Dr. Kota Rajesh from American Oncology Institute was the Chief Guest. In his address he said, early diagnosis of cancer can help detecting symptomatic patients as early as possible, so as to have the best chance for successful treatment. When cancer care is delayed or inaccessible there is a lower chance of survival, greater problems associated with treatment and higher costs of care. The reports say in every four cancer patients one is from India. He also suggested that when a person is diagnosed with cancer it doesn't mean the end of life. Hence, everyone should have a proper awareness on cancer and change their lifestyle accordingly to prevent and diagnose cancer in its early stage. Principal Sri E. Vara Prasad, NSS Coordinators Sri J. Panduranga Rao, Ms. G. Geetha Pavani and Sri D. Pavan Kumar participated in this programme.
